Fleecing the Country Speculators.

They advertise in the small local newspapers of New York State and throughout the country, and according to the reports of the inspectors their methods are more direct and far more profitable than those of the sandbag operators. They receive large amounts of money by mail, usually in small sums, with which they are directed to play were in a finished condition. smounts of money by mail, usually in small sums, with which they are directed to play certain stocks. They keep a set of books for mail orders, and these, according to the reports made by the inspectors, are carefully doctored each day, so that the victim transacting business by mail is certain to lose. If he orders a certain stock in a letter received by the "commission broker" at 10 o'clock in the morning no entry is made in the books. When the stock moves in a fashion to cause the player to lose, an enfashion to cause the player to lose, an en-correspond with other State Commissioners with a view of uniting them in erecting a showing that the stock was bought or sold building for joint occupancy. just prior to the announcement by the teker that lost the investment to the mail DR. In New York every brokerage firm suspected of using the mails to defraud has been under investigation at some time during the past month, and while not all of them will be included in the list now being made up, the aumber will be large enough to cause something of a stir among the fake ticker fraternity. As soon as the department has prepared its list of New York firms to be put under the ban other cities will be taken up, Investigations have already been made in several of the large cities, and pefore the work is completed the department will have played invoce with the buck et shop folk all over the land.

Mr. Henry Clews said last night: "I believe that there is provocation for federal interference of that sort. The trustworthy brokers will not object to it. I don't think it will make a sensation in offices that have been doing a legitimate business, however. They have tried so many things to break up the bucket shops."

Mr. E. D. Cughbert said: "Perhaps there is no other way of arresting the pirates. It is not a very simple way, but perhaps it is the only one."
